

How literacy sponsors affect younger children

Throughout this semester we have done a lot of research on literacy sponsors, while doing this research we have found a lot of information on how much literacy sponsors affect children. There are a lot of affects good and bad on the children that your parents and teachers could help the children with their work. Some of the affects are forming a good one on one bond with the student and being able to help them with whatever they need at that time. Studies show that if you have a good bond with your students they are more likely to come to you and ask for help then if you did not have a good bond with them. In my opinion i have always felt that if i have a good bond with a teacher or a peer i am more than likely to do well in their class or with them as a person. I need that bond to be able to make sure i know what i am doing. With all of the research we have done i have also learned that if you do not have a certain person in your life to help to teach you something in life it can be very hard to want to learn it or be able to learn it on your own.

The main literacy sponsors in your life are parents teachers or anyone that has a purpose in your life and have helped you in someway through life. With teachers being your literacy sponsor you have to make sure that you can focus and form a bond with your teacher or professor. While your parents have been there for you since you were born and they are the ones who have more than likely taught you a lot of what you know you have to make sure that you are willing to let them help you even when you are older. When you are younger they will help you learn to talk,walk and to even read and write before they send you to school.

There are also negative affects on literacy sponsors and that comes into play when you have a teacher or a parent who is not willing to help you with what you need to do and they make you do it all alone. I have had a few times in my life when i have had a teacher that did not want to help me in any way and they had me do things alone all the time, when that happened it made me not want to ask questions for help and it made me upset and i struggled really hard in that class. When i was struggling it made it hard for my mom to help me when i got home because i would get so angry with her because i did not know how to do the work. I feel that it is needed to be able to know what you are doing while in class so you can take that information home to your parents. I feel that literacy sponsors play a big part in a persons life and mainly in younger children to help them do bigger and better things in life and to not struggle like many of us have in school.
